Another Dr. Who/Ten bit for athens7, because "a gift for a gift" is the only way the ancient law of retaliation makes sense to me.

Alone, adj.: separate (from my destroyed planet, from my extinct species); apart (from each and every and any one living being in the whole of timespace).

Synonyms: abandoned (hm, yees, in a way, not so much. A little bit), companionless (right now, but there is a whole lot of places to find another, perhaps), deserted (no, not deserted in the least, the TARDIS and I are a definitely not-deserted where), desolate (oh, come on, there's always something nice to see out there to cheer one up), detached (well, true enough; those few million light-years do feel a little detached-y), forsaken (I'd say not any more often than forsaking, so to speak, therefore ...maybe), friendless (definitely not), individual (that's a clear plus-- hive minds are too noisy, that buzz...), lonely (do I feel lonely I? I never think about it. Unless I'm lying), lonesome ("endowed with the character of being alone". So, true), me and my shadow (no definite shadows in the TARDIS. About those outside, I don't want to think), solitary (a hint of permanence here, so, No. It's temporary, whatever the coordinates), unassisted (almost never), unattached (technically true), unattended (as if the TARDIS and I need attendance!), widowed (...am I?)

Antonyms: together (when it happens, the most glorious feeling).
